Multiplier event AP the facts:

8/2/23

Part of 'the dive-in week' (Diversity & Inclusion) at our university of applied sciences.

Nice and diverse group attendees.

19 students; social work, social educational care work, teacher training

23 professionals; additional support-teachers, teachers, social (educational care) workers.

Positive elements:

- The importance of play for learning without being 'educational'.
- New insights in the role mediators/teachers.
- Concrete guidelines to get children in to free play (especially for target-groups).

Challenges:

- Getting everyone on the same page to implement this

Weak points:

- Large pack to master as a student/professional.
- Time consuming to implement.

Fun fact:

We were able to write a short chapter (Inclusive play, playing inclusive) for an upcoming book from 2 of our colleagues of teacher training department about the findings and method of PINC!

SSSST, you're not allowed to say that!

How we can raise
little children
without prejudice
and why we need to do that urgently...
